Dear Dr. Hornbeck,

I have asked to meet with the Presbyteral Council of the Archdiocese of New York to explain why the Catholic Church should correct the Magis Center, which is run by a Jesuit. The Magis center uses pseudoscience to proselytize. I very recently had an insight into what would cause someone to think the Big Bang and other phenomena is evidence of God's existence. I want to explain my insight in person to someone knowledgeable about fundamental theology. Knowing that Catholic theologians have a duty to assist the Magisterium, I am telling you about this matter.

There are links to articles I have written about this matter on one of my websites

(<http://www.pseudoscience123.com>) under "Magis Center for Faith and Science." You will also find there my letter to the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith.

Dear David,

Thank you very much for sending your writings about the cosmological argument. I read the links with interest; your psychological argument enriches the discussion of this fundamental issue. It's always been my thought that a psychological explanation is supremely useful but does not necessarily contradict and ontological explanation. Be that as it may, I trust you will carry one with your own plumbing of this argument.

With best wishes for a fruitful new year,

Elizabeth

Dear Fr. Leinhard,
About three years ago, we exchanged emails about whether or not Stephen Barr understood thermodynamics because of his conduct concerning an article about evolution published by the American Journal of Physics. You and Fr. Koterski indicated that you didn't feel qualified to question Barr's understanding of thermodynamics. I must confess that I still haven't gotten the journal to retract the absurd article, but I have documented how many people are collaborating with the AJP's misconduct. This should be of interest to historians.

It turns out the Stephen Barr also does not understand the arguments for God's existence. He is an advisor to Fr. Spitzer and wrote a book about God's existence. I don't think you can plead "not qualified" in this case. I have not yet gotten a response from Dr. Hornbeck.

Very truly yours, David Roemer sent email 9/7 and he responded saying he was not qualified. I told him he has a moral obligation to resign from the Catholic group.

Send email on 10/9 also a link to the book review.

email sent on 8/25/15 Dear Fr. McShane,

Using the faculty directory of the Theology Department, I sent emails to 31 faculty members and left a message on their voicemail asking if they got the email and offering to discuss the matter with them. Six did not have phone numbers, so I faxed my communication. The proof of these six faxes is attached, as is the content of the email I sent. I've also attached the proof of delivery of my concerns to the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith. I got only one response:

"This is in response to your recent email and phone call today.

Unfortunately the matter you refer to is far outside the purview of my field, knowledge or work here at Fordham, and I am unable to be of assistance."

Is no one at Fordham interested in the arguments for God's existence? The authenticity of the Shroud of Turin?
Pseudoscience and evolution?

Very truly yours, David Roemer

Spoke to secretary on 8/24/15. Told about sending faxes and making calls. Said it will make Fordham look bad. She said she would tell his assistant.
