Dear Mr. Roemer,
I am wondering why my name, along with the rest of the faculty of Immaculate Conception Seminary, is listed on your web site. Perhaps I am misinterpreting it, but there appears to be an inference that we support you and your organization.
In point of fact, I am not familiar with your work, and at no time have expressed any opinion about it whatsoever, positive or negative.

I would be most appreciative for an explanation, as well as the removal of my name from your site.
I also want to make you aware that I am bringing this to the attention of Msgr. Reilly, rector of ICS.

Thank you for the E-mail and for the offer to write an article for the Chesterton Review, based on the articles you forwarded to me. But I'm afraid that the article would not one that we would be able to publish.

Thank you, though, for writing to us about the matter

Dear Zeni,
I've pasted on the most recent letter and attached the letter I sent to all 41 theologians at Seton Hall.

I have also attached a draft of a letter I will send the president of St. John's if Christopher Vogt does not agree to let me give a seminar at St. John's. I discussed this with him yesterday, and got the impression he was reconsidering his decision not to invite me to St. John's.

Dear David,
Thanks for the e-mail. I looked briefly over the website, and saw my name listed as a faculty member of ICSST. It seemed that there was some implication that I was an advisor for either Magis Center or Ave Maria Radio. I'm not aware of being an advisor for either and I was unable to find myself listed as such on either site. If you think I am listed as an advisor for either could you please send where they have me listed as such? I'm not sure why my name is associated with this controversy. Please advise.

Best, Jeff

Dear Fr. Reilly,
I've attached the open letter I sent to the theology departments of St. John's U, Fordham U., and Georgetown U. I was hoping to meet with theologians to explain the insight referred to in my letter.

Since no one was interested, I expressed it in an essay and submitted it to Science, Religion, and Culture. In online submissions, you are sometimes asked to recommend reviewers. I recommended you and the theology chairs at Fordham and St. Johns. I chose you instead of the chair at Georgetown because I did not have her email address. The editor of Science, Religion, and Culture is Gregg D. Caruso of Corning Community College.

My guess is the the folks at Fordham, St. Johns, and Georgetown are a bunch of scaredy cats. I hope this is not true of Seton Hall.

Very truly yours, David Roemer
